Customer Reviews

A native Charlestonian, Margaret (Peg) M.R. Eastman was a professional guide at Winterthur Museum in Delaware. She coauthored Hidden History of Old Charleston and authored Remembering Old Charleston. She is a freelance writer for the Charleston Mercury and has lectured on Charleston architecture.

Interesting but difficult to follow. This book focuses more on people from old Charleston rather than the history of the city itself. It was tough to follow because it jumps around a lot telling stories about many different Charlestonians. Still a good read.

Ok

Great!!! I'll be back!

Lots of great facts here that underlie the history of a beautiful old city and surrounding area. A good read if you're familiar with the area - Or want to be!

History you didn't know until now.

Good read

I'm from Charleston, parents are from Charleston, grandparents and great-grandparents from Charleston... This is merely mildly interesting to me. Cannot imagine anyone else would care...

Charleston's history is deep and this book is the newest contribution to that history. From family archives there come very interesting stories about various families in Charleston. I highly recommend it if you are a lover of history. Good source material and well researched and compiled. I will admit however a bit of bias as I am a descendent of several of the families written about in the book. These were stories I was raised on and it is wonderful to finally see them in print!
