Nick Korolev, best known for his award winning pet portraits and wildlife paintings, has been a published writer since age 14. He has had articles and short fiction on pets appear in national magazines, won several awards for short Gothic horror fiction and has written an award winning comedy stage play. Over the last few years he has turned to writing historical novels. KIFRI: THE DOG THAT CHOSE TO LIVE WITH MAN, his first novel for young adults, was inspired by prehistoric rock paintings and the Basenji hounds he has owned all his adult life. His Basenji, Nala, appears on the cover. The novel was first published on the e-book site of Thunder Mountain Press where out of 100 books it won the Thunder Mountain Press 1998 Editors Choice Award. He was born in Elizabeth, N.J. and presently resides in Sedona, AZ.

very kind and the best seller. for a host , very fast, receive it next day, very recommend . This is a wonderful product at an awesome price point. Out of the packaging, it was ready to use, with no sharpening required. No tearing, no pulling, easy to clean, and a nice grip.

I really enjoyed reading this book. It tells the story of a young bushman in Africa, on the cusp of manhood. He befriends a young dog, and introduces her to the tribe. This is a great coming-of-age story, as well as a historically accurate description of how dogs were domesticated. Besides being a great story, this is a well-crafted and well-written book. The characters are finely drawn, and their actions and interactions are complex and believable. By the end of the book, they feel like old friends. The author's evocative descriptions of the landscape and scenery also draw the reader into the story. It is a book to be treasured.
