Founded in 1915 as the Cartographic Group, the first division of the National Geographic Society, National Geographic Maps has been responsible for illustrating the world around us through the art and science of mapmaking. Today, National Geographic Maps continues this mission by creating the world's best wall maps, recreation maps, atlases, and globes which inspire people to care about and explore their world. All proceeds from the sale of National Geographic maps go to support the Society's non-profit mission to increase global understanding and promote conservation of our planet through exploration, research, and education.

It has no lines of longitude or latitude. I've never seen a "map" without these crucial navigation features. Although for the record you do not need a map in Annapurna. Navigation is child's play.

Wish I had read the other reviews first. This map is very out-of-date, and is missing lots of detail I can find elsewhere online. I was hoping for a map that would show many of the numerous side trails and cut-offs, but it is very skimpy. One review states the map doesn't have lat-lon lines; while true, it does show lat-lon on the margins the way many maps do. The statement "revised regularly on the front of the map is meaningless in this case. It also shows no hotels at two major villages that are loaded with them. This Nat Geo map is a stinker.

Tear and wind resistant, inserts with Kathmandu and Thamel maps.....but all of it in small scale.....you either need a magnifying glass or have someone 12 y.o. reading the map for you.NOT updated-as advertised-the map does NOT show the new "jeep road" " trail" or "both"If you need a great map of Annapurna get "Annapurna Atlas" published by Milestone Himalayan Series, Partha Banerjee-it has 15 nice foldout maps and one overview map. I used it all the time and the Nat Geo map waswell "to have it" I guess.
