History Year By Year

Synopsis

Featuring more than 1,500 images that bring the story of the past to life through a detailed timeline, this visual reference helps children navigate the influences, patterns, and connections between historical events, beginning with prehistory and running up to the Arab Spring. Budding historians will learn about the history of humans across the world in History Year by Year. Spreads highlight major historical eras including the Renaissance and the French Revolution, while quotations from primary and secondary sources provide further insight and give proper historical context. Kids will love the "child of the time" feature, which details the experience of children during important historical periods, including Ancient Egypt, Viking England, the Industrial Revolution, and World War II. Created in association with the Smithsonian Institution, History Year by Year is a visual journey throughout time and an invaluable reference for kids who want to connect the dots of history across the globe.

Gr 4-8-Divided into different eras, with various ranges of time ("Before History Began," "Really Ancient History," "Much More Civilized," "The Marvelous Middle Ages," "Exploring and Reforming," "Time for Change," "Empires and World Wars," and "Fast Forward"), this offering follows the publisher's successful pattern of full-color pictures, brief blurbs of text, and highlighted features focusing on particular aspects of the broader subject. Starting with "3 MYA" ("million years ago") and ending with "1945-present," each part of the book gives a brief overview of what was going on in different parts of the world at the same time. A color-coded time line runs across most of the spreads, showing the progression and advancement of civilization. Every few pages, a particular subtopic gets extra attention. For instance, in the "700 BCE-500 CE" section, there is a two-page discussion, replete with a color picture of Chinese emperor Qin Shi Huangdi's terra-cotta army. Features such as these make this an excellent browsing book, but students can still pull information from the text. A brief history of both the United States and Canada is appended. A good addition to most collections, both for the information it offers and for its appealing format.-Carol Fazioli, Barth Elementary School, Pottstown, PA (c) Copyright 2013. Library Journal. Presented in a time-line format, this is a visually astonishing excursion through world history from 3.5 million years ago to 2012. The colorful ribbon of time across the middle of each page is branched off with blocks of text and accompanying illustrations (photos of artifacts and events, drawings, and diagrams) to provide a stimulating, browser-friendly design throughout. Most double-page spreads cover a specific-length segment of time, starting at millions of years in prehistoric times, reducing to smaller time spans as history becomes more detailed, and then finally settling in at five years for most spreads from 1910 onward. Special pages highlighting major eventsâ "or, in some cases, focusing upon the lives of childrenâ "are interspersed throughout. The coverage is inclusive, touching upon activities in all parts of the world, though much of the information will require a fairly sophisticated knowledge of history to understand. Although designed for reference, this has the feel of a carefully crafted museum exhibit. Grades 6-9. --Randall Enos

This is a great book. My 8 year old daughter shocked me by asking for a history book (who are you?!) and I decided on this one because it was from Smithsonian. Glad I did! Beautiful pictures, easy to understand, and very thorough.

This is a fabulous history resource for homeschoolers - organized in timeline form. Short blurbs of information about hundreds of events, people, places, etc. Enough to learn a bit and inspire further research.

This book is organized so well. I bought it for my son, however, it is on MY bedside table. I studied math and science, and although I love going to museums, I actually don't know much history. This book is an incredible start!

My 12 year old loves this book. The first half is a little boring, but that may be because I am not as interested in early civilizations. Can't wait to get to the more modern stuff. It's very well done visually.

Bought this for my 4 grader as a non fiction option to read. She hasn't really got into yet....but I'm hopeful. Easy to read, quick stories with picture to keep interest.

Really easy to follow fun book. I got it for my Dad who loves history. He's 77 and wouldn't sit down to a complicated book that is work to read at this stage. He loved it and wouldn't put it down. It would also be good for kids.

This awesome book is A fabulous history of the world. The timeline is accompanied by stunning and interesting illustrations, A must for all ages of history buffs! The artifacts are interesting and the format will inspire imagination!

Bought this for my 11 year old who loves reading about history. Its a great book and I even found myself reading it. He keeps going back to at on different occasions.
