High Conflict People In Legal Disputes
People with high conflict personalities (HCPs) clog our courts as plaintiffs with inappropriate claims against their personal "targets of blame," and as defendants who have harmed others and need to be stopped. Everybody knows someone with a High Conflict Personality. "How can he be so unreasonable?" "Why does she keep fighting? Can't she see how destructive she is?" "Can you believe they're going to court over ______?" Some HCPs are more difficult than others, but they tend to share a similar preoccupation with blame that drives them into one dispute after another; and keeps everyone perplexed about how to deal with them. Using case examples and an analysis of the general litigation and negotiation behaviors of HCPs, this book helps make sense of the fears that drive people to file lawsuits and complaints. It provides insight for containing their behavior while managing and/or resolving their disputes. Characteristics of the five "high-conflict" personality disorders are explored: Borderline, Narcissistic, Histrionic, Paranoid, Antisocial.

Bill Eddy is a lawyer, therapist, mediator, and President of the High Conflict Institute. He developed the "High Conflict Personality" theory and is an international expert on the subject. Important book for any professional who deals with people. It helps you to better understand personality disorder and how it works and give you hints to develop better skills to deal with those people who, actually, need help to have a better future life.

Great resource. Eddy explains what’s particularly enticing to disordered people about lawsuits, and how to de-escalate conflicts with these "high conflict people."

I am a family law attorney and i have to say that this book has become a staple in my practice. It should be required reading for anyone involved in divorce or custody work.
